

*Hoodoo lamp
Greg Ball, Edmonton, and Shoko Cesarz, Calgary*

Intended to convey the spirit of the powerful Alberta landscape, the Hoodoo lamp was inspired by hoodoos – spooky, spiky stone formations eroded by wind and water – in the Drumheller badlands. The four-foot-tall sculptural shape, reminiscent of a topographical map, was made by combining layers of Coroplast, a corrugated plastic sheet material, that were precision-cut by a computer-driven milling machine.

Levitt: Casper the friendly ghost! A flying saucer! This is an unusual work that makes you ask, "What's going on?"

Taylor: Well, the blue fluorescent bulb does emit a ghostly glow.
